Healthpoint /DFB based in San Antonio, Texas, is engaged in developing and manufacturing topical consumer products such as skin creams, eye drops, fragrances, and bath and beauty products. Increasing demand for their products has resulted in consistent sales growth, as well as the need for expanded product research space.

Recently, Healthpoint / DFB moved onto the Brooks Air Force Base and entered into a lease for six refurbished labs. During the lab design process, it became evident to Craig Smith, Commercial Products Territory Manager, that Healthpoint / DFB had two main concerns related to lab furniture that needed to be addressed:

1. The furniture system selected must offer durability and be easy to transport to new facilities at the end of the lease period.
2. The furniture system selected must be easy to reconfigure within the lab area as research requirements change.

Mobile Starsys WorkCenters provided the results Healthpoint / DFB sought. Not only does the mobile furniture system facilitate easy setup and tear down, but it also enables the scientists to configure the work centers in a straight line or in a work cell ("C") in a matter of minutes. Healthpoint / DFB are so pleased with the performance of the system that they're considering using Starsys WorkCenters for additional lab space slated for expansion.
