FLEET ACCOUNT OF THE MONTH

We thank you for your business!

Stevens Point East | Badger Heating and Cooling

TAKING THE HEAT

You know your vehicle has a lot of hoses that carry various fluids. And if you have a heater in your vehicle, you will have heater hoses.

Heater hoses connects to and from the engine so some coolant can be circulated through a little radiator called a heater core. In cold weather, that heater core acts as a heat exchanger to heat up your cabin.

Even in the hot weather, the heater hoses can prove problematic. That is because they may remain pressurized even though you are not running your heater. Heater hoses are made from tough materials since they must handle heat and pressure. But even the durable rubber, plastic and metal they are made from can crack or leak from years of use. That means coolant can be sprayed out into the engine compartment or leak onto a driveway or garage floor.

You may be able to see a puddle of coolant under your vehicle or perhaps smell the odor of the coolant under the hood. Some say it has a sweet smell. Another sign coolant may be leaking out of the heater hoses is your engine may be running hotter. You'll be able to tell by watching the heat gauge on your dash. Let's say your heat gauge usually points just slightly below halfway between the C and H (Cold and Hot) of the heat gauge. But now it is just slightly above. That's enough to tell you that the coolant temperature has gone up a little, a possible sign of trouble.

This is a good time to schedule an appointment have us look. If we catch the leak when it's small, it's a relatively simple matter of draining the coolant, replacing the hoses and replacing the coolant. Sometimes, though, a heater hose can suddenly burst and a lot of coolant can leak out quickly. That can, in turn, cause your engine to start to overheat. In that case, you may see your vehicle's temperature gauge shoot up pretty quickly. No coolant can cause severe engine damage. Preventative maintenance is your best insurance against heater hose problems

A radiator flush provides several benefits to your vehicles cooling system. There is a significant difference between a flush of the cooling system and a simple draining of the radiator. Draining the radiator only removes about 50% of the total antifreeze in the system and leaves behind contaminants that have built up in the system over time. Leaking or corroded radiators and heaters can restrict coolant flow causing poor heater performance and engine overheating. The benefits of having your cooling system flushed are:

Removes rust and scale deposits. Over time rust and scale deposits build up within the radiator. A flush helps to remove these deposits, which get pushed out with the old antifreeze. This is important since these buildups can cause overheating or even damage your radiator.

Lubricates the water pump. The additives in the coolant lubricate the vehicles water pump. This helps to lengthen the life of the water pump.

HUMOR

A little girl asked her father, "Daddy? Do all Fairy Tales begin with Once Upon A Time?"

He replied, "No, there is a whole series of Fairy Tales that begin with "if Elected I promise..."

December is the month when the kids begin to discuss what to get Dad for Christmas.

Some insist on a shirt.

Others insist on a pair of socks.

The argument always ends in a tie.

I asked my phone, "Siri, why am I so bad with remembering?"

She said, "I'm Alexa, you moron."
